FOOTSTEPS IN HISTORY

AUTHORHOUSE, United States, 2008. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 216 x 211 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .In August 2005, I entered the Shearer Cemetery for the first time. It took 15 minutes, beating through brush and vines, to reach the middle where only the gravestone of Martha Lee was found. A few weeks later, I discussed the experience with my Michigan History students. They were quite interested in checking it out. After my class visited the cemetery, two students returned having discovered the buried stone of Hiram Jerome Tibbits. Hiram died August 23, 1832, before reaching the age of ten. This stone was our first major find and would spark continued interest among my students in restoring this Pioneer site. Twice during our research we acquired outstanding primary resources. The first was from Mr. James Curtis, who owns the original Tibbits house in Plymouth. He sent us a speech that Mr. John S. Tibbits gave to the Pioneer Society of Michigan on July 27, 1873. The second resource was a random needle in the haystack. As I was looking through the Plymouth Mail in the Plymouth Historical Museum in the summer of 2006, I spotted a letter to the editor by John S. Tibbits, the same letter that is placed on the final page of our story. These two primary resources provided enough information to carve out a story of Plymouth's past. From there our main objective was to help our younger students learn about our community from the original work of our older students. Our book attempts to show how communities change over time. With the support and financial assistance of both the United States Department of Education's Smaller Learning Communities Grant, and Teaching American History Grant, we were able to fund this...
