Sisson, treasurer general of the interstate board and president of the Pennsylvania Commission; Perry s Victory the Precursor of One Hundred Years of Peace, Gen. J. Warren Keifer, United States commissioner. From the Fourth of July to the formal celebration of the centenary of the Battle of Lake Erie, September 10, Put in Bay was the scene of daily patriotic observances of the centennial period. Many patriotic societies, educational institutions, and military and industrial organizations held their annual meetings on the island, and half a million people visited the slowly rising memorial. The Niagara twice visited the ancient harbor during this period, remaining from two to five days in port, and was received with the greatest enthusiasm on both occasions. The marine interest of the summer centered in the Perry s centennial regattas, under the auspices of the Inter-Lake Yachting Association, conducting its twentieth annual regatta. A program of four weeks was devoted to regattas of sail yachts, power boats, aviation, rowing, canoeing, swimming, and other water sports, and many of the events included national as well as inter-Lake participation. Upon this occasion the naval militia interests of the Atlantic and Pacific coasts were for the first time represented at an inland event of this character. The centenary exercises commemorating the Battle of Lake Erie were held on September 9, 10, and 11, at which time ceremonies of a semidedicatory nature were celebrated at the unfinished memorial, and a...
